

THE OPUS

Keep the outdoor life exciting and simple with a camper trailer designed to make adventuring easy

Versatility and style help make the Opus camper trailer from Purple Line an ideal choice for today's active Aussie. Contemporary and ergonomic design combines European sensibility with Australian ingenuity to produce a sleek, strong and super lightweight camper that can be towed by virtually any kind of vehicle. Quick and easy to setup and take down, the Opus empowers you to take off with family and friends whenever the spirit to get away suddenly strikes. With an incredible 500kg load carrying capacity on top, and heaps of storage throughout, the Opus makes it possible for you to bring along all your favourite bits of gear and oversized items like push bikes, boats and camp furniture that can sometimes be awkward and complicated to travel with. Australian conditions can be challenging enough without your camper trailer working against you. The Opus from Purple Line makes reliable, luxurious travel more accessible than you may have imagined and twice as much fun as you could have ever hoped for.

The tent on the Opus is made from a heavy-duty, 400gsm micro-weave poly/cotton blend canvas that combines the high breathability and water-tightness of cotton with the strength and water resistance of polyester. When erect, the tent helps to create the Opus's high ceiling effect that gives you heaps of functional living space inside.

The Opus's internal kitchen area comes complete with a stainless steel sink, two-burner Hob, three-way refrigerator and microwave to cover all of your essential cooking and food storage needs. The camper's contemporary and ergonomic layout arranges all of your appliances conveniently and will provide you with plenty of space to move about comfortably.

With the inclusion of a rugged, five-leaf off-road suspension and electric disc brakes, with off-road magnets. The Opus has been engineered from the bottom up for true blue Aussie action and adventure. The Opus cruises on 15in, five-stud alloy wheels and all-terrain tyres so it can be trusted to perform even over tough tracks and heavily corrugated roads.

Engineered for all-terrain travel and providing comfortable accommodation under any conditions, the Opus' tent is modular in design in so far that an additional awning can be joined to the main tent, creating an extension that measures a full 2m wide. For even more room, a pair of inner extension pods can be attached, gaining you another 2.4 of covered living space, so there's plenty of room for family and friends keen to tag along on your next bush adventure.

From low profile to high-class in only a matter of minutes, the simple-to-setup Opus camper trailer makes it easy for you to enjoy extended stays at a single location or quick overnight stops as you go. With stabilising legs designed to wind down quickly and a folding tent section that assembles smoothly, you'll be free to spend more time enjoying the perks of your campsite and less effort making it ready.

The robust, yet lightweight body of the Opus camper trailer is largely attributed to its composite sandwich panel construction. These dynamic sandwich panel walls are comprised of alternating layers of aluminium and ply with an insulated core to deliver top-notch structural rigidity and a resistance to impact and harsh weather.

Your chassis on the Opus is hot-dip galvanised to effectively seal it with a super-tough coating designed to resist corrosion and rust. The extended drawbar is made from 100mm x 50mm sections of steel and is fitted with dedicated holders for two jerry cans, a lockable holder for carrying one 9kg gas bottle and a front-mounted toolbox perfect for packing along extra camp gear.

With two fixed double-bed areas that feature their own privacy tents plus a cosy seating area roomy enough to accommodate the whole the gang, the deceptively spacious interior of the Opus definitely delivers more than meets the eye. The central dining table can be packed down easily enabling your club-style to be converted into an additional bed.
